Long Distance II by Tony Harrison

1 Though my mother was already two years dead
 Dad kept her slippers warming by the gas,
 put hot water bottles her side of the bed
 and still went to renew her transport pass.

5 You couldn't just drop in. You had to phone.
 He'd put you off for an hour to give him time to clear away her things and look alone
 as though his still raw love were such a crime.

10 He couldn't risk my blight of disbelief
 though sure that very soon he'd hear her key scrape in the rusted lock and end his grief.
 He knew she's just popped out to get the tea.

15 I believe life ends with death, and that is all.
 You haven't both gone shopping; just the same,
 in my black leather phone book there's your name and the disconnected number I still call.

Silence by Anthony Thwaite

1 This silence, with you away –
These silences, day after day –
Silence itself, pure and cold and grey –

5 Once I welcomed it, heard
Nothing but peace, even a bird
Disturbing it. Without a word

Silence welcomed me, took
Me in friendliness, shook
Melancholy out, thrust a book

10 Into my hands, so that I read
Hungry of what lay ahead,
Not thinking of the dead.

15 Alone,
Silence lies along the bone,
Grey, cold as a stone.

2 Conflict

Read the two poems below and then answer both part a) and part b).

You are advised to spend about 45 minutes on part a) and 30 minutes on part b).

A Poison Tree by William Blake

- 1 I was angry with my friend:
I told my wrath, my wrath did end.
I was angry with my foe:
I told it not, my wrath did grow.
- 5 And I watered it in fears,
Night and morning with my tears;
And I sunned it with smiles,
And with soft deceitful wiles.
- 10 And it grew both day and night,
Till it bore an apple bright.
And my foe beheld it shine.
And he knew that it was mine,
- 15 And into my garden stole
When the night had veiled the pole;
In the morning glad I see
My foe outstretched beneath the tree.

Anger by Charles and Mary Lamb

1 Anger in its time and place
May assume a kind of grace.
It must have some reason in it,
And not last beyond a minute.
5 If to further lengths it go,
It does into malice grow.
'Tis the difference that we see
'Twixt the serpent and the bee.
If the latter you provoke
10 It inflicts a hasty stroke,
Puts you to some little pain,
But it never stings again.
Close in tufted bush or brake
Lurks the poison-swelled snake
15 Nursing up his cherished wrath;
In the purlieu of¹ his path,
In the cold, or in the warm,
Mean him good, or mean him harm,
Wheresoever fate may bring you,
20 The vile snake will always sting you.

Midnight on the Great Western by Thomas Hardy

1 In the third-class seat sat the journeying boy,
And the roof-lamp's oily flame
Played down on his listless form and face,
Bewrapt past knowing to what he was going,
5 Or whence he came.

In the band of his hat the journeying boy
Had a ticket stuck; and a string
Around his neck bore the key of his box,
That twinkled gleams of the lamp's sad beams
10 Like a living thing.

What past can be yours, O journeying boy
Towards a world unknown,
Who calmly, as if incurious quite
On all at stake, can undertake
15 This plunge alone?

Knows your soul a sphere, O journeying boy,
Our rude realms far above,
Whence with spacious vision you mark and mete
This region of sin that you find you in,
20 But are not of?

Childhood by Edna Jacques

1 She does not know that rooms are bleak and bare,
That poverty dwells with us all the while;
It is enough for her that I am there
To praise her little deeds, to sing and smile.

5 She does not know that heartache hovers near
Above the place where lie her dolls asleep,
That eyes grow wide and dark with naked fear
And life seems such a tired trust to keep.

10 Sunlight to her is earth's most precious gold,
Daisies and buttercups are jewels rare,
A clump of mignonette¹ is wealth untold,
Her crown a wreath of flowers in her hair.

15 No banquet hall in all the bounteous land
Has half the glory of a picnic spread
Out on a shining beach, with sun and sand,
Wind in her face, and seagulls overhead.

20 Oh, may our hearts be glad for common things,
Whitecaps at sea and tattered driftwood piled,
Finding in these the peace that Heaven brings.
Grant us the simple wisdom of a child.
